Overview & History

The Lane 1929 Building offers a distinctive opportunity to occupy a piece of Portland's industrial heritage reimagined for modern creative office use. Originally constructed in 1929 as the Lane-Miles Standish Printing Plant, the building was commissioned by prominent printing entrepreneurs Alan Lane and Miles Standish and designed by the renowned Austin Company.

Showcasing elements of late Gothic Revival architecture (a rare style for industrial buildings) the property reflects a unique blend of historic character and architectural craftsmanship inspired by European design. The building served as a printing facility for decades before being thoughtfully adapted into a creative office environment.

The property has been listed on the National Register of Historic Places to retain its historic identity and benefits from its integration with the adjacent Lane 1919 residential development. Today, tenants can enjoy a one-of-a-kind workspace that combines authentic character, rich history, and an ideal location in Portland's vibrant Slabtown neighborhood.

Slabtown

Slabtown is one of Northwest Portland's most dynamic and rapidly evolving neighborhoods, blending historic character with modern urban energy. Positioned between the Pearl District and Nob Hill, it offers exceptional connectivity, walkability, and a vibrant mix of retail, dining, and residential development. With strong population growth, new Class A multifamily projects, and increasing foot traffic, Slabtown has become a highly sought-after destination for businesses looking to capture an affluent, engaged customer base in a thriving urban corridor.
