Originally constructed in 1978 by Tektronix, the large floor plates, with heavy load bearing capacity position the building for exceptional manufacturing uses. Heavy power and excessive cooling capacity are basic features for a variety of alternative uses. The current use is that of a call center for density of 1,800 employees. The 19-acre site provides abundant parking with plenty of room for structural expansion.

Owned by Hines Development, capital, design expertise, planning and construction are readily available to bring life to the next enterprise.

Potential uses are guided by the Urban Center (UC) zoning overlay. Mixed Use (MU), Research Park (RP) and Office Research (OR) all overlap portions of the site. Predominant categories permitted include: high-density residential; office; research & development; industrial services; and data centers.

Located at the intersection of NW 185th & NE Walker Road in the gateway to the Sunset Corridor, the site is uniquely postured as a major employment center for high-tech or advanced manufacturing uses for which the Sunset Corridor is known.

We welcome your ideas of new life for a classic structure originally built for high tech production on a pristine 19-acre site surrounded by supporting lifestyle services.

The Neighborhood

A major draw of the Tanasbourne neighborhood is its shopping and dining scene, anchored by The Streets of Tanasbourne, an open-air shopping center featuring major retailers, boutique stores, and a variety of restaurants. Additional shopping centers, such as Tanasbourne Town Center and Tanasbourne Village, provide even more retail and grocery options, making it a convenient place to live. The area also boasts numerous parks and recreational facilities, including Magnolia Park, which features playgrounds, picnic areas, and a splash pad for families to enjoy.

Beyond its retail and residential appeal, Tanasbourne is a significant employment hub, with many professionals working in the nearby tech, medical, and corporate offices. Companies in the Silicon Forest, such as Intel and Nike, are a short commute away, and the neighborhood is home to medical facilities like Kaiser Permanente Westside Medical Center. With easy access to TriMet's MAX Blue Line and several bus routes, Tanasbourne offers excellent connectivity for those who prefer public transit, further enhancing its appeal as a dynamic and well-rounded community.
